Student Self-Advocacy: Four Critical Areas To Help Students Help Themselves Tuesday, February 6 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Going off to college presents multiple challenges for students. For residential students, they confront physical separation from their support network back home. Commuter students have new logistical concerns to tackle. All students have to learn to navigate the unfamiliar demands of higher education. They quickly come face-to-face with academic and non-academic challenges.

They can wait/depend on the college to provide road signs for what to do. Effective events like campus orientation introduce students to people, resources, and processes available for their benefit. We tell them what office, person, or website link to visit. Do we also spend time helping them develop strategies to advocate for themselves? When they feel disconnected and lost, do they have the tools to authentically speak up for what they need? This webinar will focus on four areas critical for understanding and promoting student self-advocacy: Connections, Disconnections, Future Me, and Seven Core Values for Success.

Objectives:

- Identify ways students can initiate, develop, and nurture meaningful relationships with the appropriate people to navigate their college experiences and build a supportive community
- Examine strategies to help students identify both academic and non-academic resources for success
- Identify the often contradictory stories students may tell themselves about their priorities and the stories they live
- Examine how to help students to stoke the fires of curiosity to find purpose
- Learn how to recognize “weak signals” for developing trends that may affect their future selves
- Understand how seven core values can provide a sense of direction for developing purpose and resilience
- Apply webinar strategies to their campuses with a Call-to-Action exercise

Who Should Attend?

- Administration
- Faculty
- Student Services/Affairs
- Career Development Centers
- Financial Aid
- Athletic Coaches
- Any educator interested in learning more about helping students to advocate for themselves

Steve Piscitelli

"We tell students what office, person, or website links to visit. Do we also spend time helping them develop strategies to advocate for themselves? When they feel disconnected and lost, do they have the tools to authentically speak up for what they need? This webinar will focus on four areas critical for understanding and promoting student self-advocacy."

Steve Piscitelli is a recognized teacher, author and workshop facilitator. Steve draws on (33) years of classroom and professional development experience to connect with his audience on a practical level. He "retired" from Florida State College at Jacksonville in 2015 and remains actively involved with faculty and administrator training across the nation. Additionally, he writes a weekly blog and produces a monthly podcast channel, both of which address the topics of growth and resilience.

His eleventh book, Stories about Teaching, Learning, and Resilience: No Need to be an Island, encourages educators to embrace the power of collaboration. Thirty-seven scenarios—based on real educational issues—bring The Seven Rs of Success to life.

Steve has written two student success books (both in their 3rd edition with Pearson Education). The University of Texas/NISOD has published five of his articles addressing basic principles of teaching and learning success.

In 2015, Florida State College at Jacksonville named Steve as one of the "Fabulous 50." Nominated by students, this recognition honored "talented and dedicated faculty and staff." Steve also received special recognition from Jacksonville University with the addition of his name to the list of "Alumni You Ought to Know."

In 2014, Steve delivered a TEDx talk: "Awareness, Assumptions and Actions: Why Do You Do What You Do?"

Steve is not a "thought leader." He recognizes you as the thought leaders on your campus. He comes to each workshop as the "question leader." He will guide you and your colleagues on a journey to help you create, share, and savor powerful teaching and learning moments. He and his wife of more than forty years, Laurie, along with his canine companion, Roxie, live in Atlantic Beach, Florida.
